

To Whom It May Concern:

By way of introduction, my name is Abby McGovern, and I am the Manager of Semester Programs here at The Fund for American Studies (TFAS). During our Capital Semester Program, students complete 12-credit hours through George Mason University, intern between 20-30 hours a week at sites across Washington DC, and participate in co-curricular events including speakers, professional development sessions and visits to key DC institutions. Kamryn Martell was a participant in our Spring 2023 Capital Semester Program, and I am writing today to offer my recommendation on her behalf.

During her time in our program, I was impressed by Kamryn on a number of levels. First and foremost, she successfully completed an internship with a PR firm here in DC, spending the semester learning the ins and outs of working in communications and podcasting.

We challenge our students to interact with and learn from different viewpoints over the course of the semester through speakers, class lectures and their peers. Kamryn was willing to engage with speakers, professors, and her peers regardless of the topic or other political perspective and exhibited maturity in the thoughtful comments and questions that she added to the discussions that were had.

Out of the students that I worked with over the semester, Kamryn stood out as enthusiastic and well-rounded. I have found her to be hard working, dedicated, open to learning and willing to go the extra mile in the personal and professional spheres of her life. I believe that the skills and character traits I have observed in her would allow her to excel in your office if given the opportunity.

Based off these observations, I recommend Kamryn Martell to you. Please feel free to contact me if you have any questions or need any additional information.

Sincerely,

Abby McGovern
